ADVERTISEMENT.

NOTHING has a greater tendency to promote the improvement and diffusion of science than the establishment of public libraries, where the circulation of the volumes is checked by as few regulations as possible, and the books are made perfectly easy of access. Besides the discouraging expense, which, without the aid of these laudable institutions, must be incurred by individuals who make researches into scientific subjects, a serious impediment to the advantageous prosecution of their labours would frequently be caused by the impossibility of obtaining a variety of scarce and ancient documents. The works on medicine, and the sciences connected with it, are in particular so numerous, and some of them so ancient, rare, and expensive, that the reasons, previously urged in favour of instituting public libraries in general, here operate with peculiar force, and imperiously call upon the members of the profession in this metropolis to estalish a Library on the most comprehensive scale for the use of themselves and posterity. Such a collection cannot fail to be of the highest utility in a scientific point of view, and an honour to the profession, and even the nation itself. When the select and valuable description of the works in the possession of the Medical and Chirurgical Society of London, and the number of volumes already collected by them are considered, in relation to what may be termed the infant state of the Institution, it will be immediately acknowledged, that no body of individuals have wrought so much in so short a period of time towards the completion of this grand undertaking. Such success is principally owing to the zeal with which the members in general are animated in the cause, and to the high character which this Society holds in the estimation of the Faculty in all parts of the world. It is this reputation which at once commands ample patronage and liberal pecuniary support, attaches to the Institution the names and good wishes of all the friends of medical science at home, and makes the honour of being inscribed upon its list a real gratification to the most distinguished professors and practitioners abroad. While this character is maintained, the Institution will always flourish ; the pages of its Transactions still continue to unfold the sentiments and experience of some of the brightest men in the profession ; and its Library enlarge, until no respectable work connected with medical science can be cited, which is not within the collection.

This Second Part of the Catalogue has been drawn up nearly on the same plan as the first, the only difference being the exclusion of duplicates, which can be more properly entered in the private or MS. catalogues of the Society. Great care has been taken, however, to insert different editions.

House of the Medical and Chirurgical
Society, Lincoln's Inn Fields,
July 2, 1819.

The first part of the report deals with the general situation of the country and the progress of the work done during the year. It is followed by a detailed account of the various projects and the results achieved. The report concludes with a summary of the work done and a list of the names of the persons who have been engaged in the work.

The work done during the year has been of a very satisfactory nature and has resulted in the completion of a number of important projects. The progress made has been due to the co-operation and assistance of the various departments and the staff of the institution.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been engaged in the work during the year:

Mr. A. B. C. D. E. F. G. H. I. J. K. L. M. N. O. P. Q. R. S. T. U. V. W. X. Y. Z.
